1. INTERNATIONAL CONTRACTS IN THE XXI CENTURY: CONTROVERSIAL ISSUES

Related to theme 4 of the 1st LSGL Conference (Business & Law –foreign investments), the course proposed by Profs. Elizalde and Fernandes focuses on current controversial issues of international contracts. Foreign investments in the 21st century pose new challenges to the Law as transnational contracts (which share common patterns in drafting) are forcing national Contract Law to evolve, re-shaping its content. The global market has brought the different legal systems closer while coping, at the time, with traditional (national) rules still in force. The analysis of how this is being done and its criticism, a task that cannot be omitted by global Law Schools, is crucial for determining the actual contractual framework that applies to foreign investments. By resorting to a comparative and international method, the course expects to raise the aforementioned questions, present how the problems that affect transnational contracts are being dealt with and reach critical conclusions. The co-convenors expect an active participation of students –which will be considered in the final assessment- who should bring the suggested materials prepared for each class.
